

GREEKS HOLDING TURK ARMY IN TRAP

(By Federal Wireless Telegraph.)
LONDON, October 25.—(Special to The Advertiser).—A Turkish army of 22,000 men, commanded by Riza Bey, is faced with the alternative of unconditional surrender or useless slaughter near the town of Serbia, Turkey, according to a special dispatch received in London from Athens, Greece, today.

The Turkish troops are hedged in on the East by high cliffs and on the West by the torrents of the river Aliakmen, the floods of which are held by Greek highlanders. On the South and South-west there is a Greek army flushed with victory.

BELGRADE, Serbia, October 25.—(Special to The Advertiser).—The Crown Prince of Serbia was in charge of the artillery during the battle of Kumanova, in which the Serbians claim to have won a great victory over the Turks, inflicting a loss of 5000 men, twelve guns and an enormous amount of ammunition.

The fighting is reported to have been of the most desperate character. The Turks are said to have had 25,000 men engaged, and the fighting continued for three days, with only short intervals, when darkness prevented the working of the guns.

RIEKA, Montenegro, October 25.—(Special to The Advertiser).—The Montenegrin army has succeeded in surrounding Scutari. Yesterday afternoon, the Montenegrin artillery opened fire on the town. The Montenegrin infantry then made a desperate attack on the town, but, encountering an annihilating fire from the Turkish artillery, the attackers were compelled to retire to their former positions.

"Strategical Retirement."
CONSTANTINOPLE, Turkey, October 25.—(By Associated Press Cable).—The fall of the Turkish stronghold, Kirk Kilesseh, is described here as a strategical retirement of the Turkish troops. Great losses on both sides are admitted.

The Turkish force now defending the important city of Adrianople is estimated at 250,000.

BERLIN, October 25.—(Special to The Advertiser).—That Grand Duke Alexis, heir to the Russian throne, who is lying ill in the imperial hunting lodge in Spaala, Russian Poland, was stabbed by a nihilist and is in grave danger, is the report in circulation here today.

The duke, who is but eight years old, it is asserted, was stabbed by the nihilist, who lay in wait for him as he came for a walk with his nurse. It is also claimed that the Czarina attempted to hurl herself from a window when she learned of her boy's injury.

The fact that all the churches in Russia are offering up prayers for the recovery of the czarvitch is believed to indicate that he is in grave danger.

His Condition Serious.
(By Federal Wireless Telegraph.)
ST. PETERSBURG, Russia, October 25.—(Special to The Advertiser).—The condition of the Czar's son is announced tonight to be serious. Prayers for his recovery are being offered throughout Russia. The heir to the Romanoff throne is reported suffering from peritonitis, but it is impossible to ascertain the real cause of his illness.

News Is Suppressed.
ST. PETERSBURG, Russia, October 25.—(By Associated Press Cable).—The bulletins on the condition of the little Crown Prince Alexis have been suspended.

CHICAGO, October 25.—(Special to The Advertiser).—Mrs. F. Cameron Falconet, it was learned today, occupies the same cell in the Rockford (Illinois) jail as her daughter, Lucille Cameron, the nineteen-year old white girl, whose alleged abduction by Jess Johnson, the big negro pugilist, led to a United States investigation of Johnson's violation of the Mann "White Slavery" law. The mother desired to see the girl to keep her under her own influence, she said, but it is believed she wants to be sure the negro does not get in touch with her daughter.

The girl is held by the Federal officials, having been unable to furnish the $25,000 bail demanded.

Foreign Power Could Seize Hawaii

(By Federal Wireless Telegraph.)
LOS ANGELES, October 25.—(Special to The Advertiser).—With a view to inspecting the fortifications of San Diego, Maj.-Gen. Leonard Wood left here for that city tonight. During his stay in Los Angeles, General Wood made several impromptu talks at entertainments given in his honor. The General advocated stronger fortifications and a larger and better equipped national guard for California.

"Few United States citizens realize the danger to our insular possessions," said General Wood today. "None of them is threatened now, but it may come any day. There is nothing to hinder a foreign Power seizing Hawaii and then making an attack on the Pacific Coast. It is our sacred duty to teach as many citizens of the United States as we can to carry arms."

CHICAGO, October 25.—(Special to The Advertiser).—Jake Stahl, manager of the world's champion Boston Red Sox, is back in Chicago, and says he wants to get baseball out of his head.

"Big Six" Mathewson showed better pitching ability than "Rube" Marquard, said Stahl, although the latter won two games for the New York Nationals in the series.

"I am mighty glad to get back to Chicago. I am going to forget baseball and try my hand at the banking business in Woodlawn again," said Stahl.

"I am glad we won the world's series, of course, but I want to say right here and now that in my mind Mathewson pitched the grandest ball I ever saw, and it was too bad he did not win his games. I will say he was not given as good support as was Marquard."

"In the games which Marquard won there were two phenomenal catches which meant defeat for him had the ball not been caught. Mathewson pitched the best ball of any of the pitchers on either side."

CANTONNIERS FOR ALL PUBLIC ROADS

"This is one of the planks in the platform which I have drawn up as a program for myself when I am elected mayor," says Colonel Parker, the Republican nominee. "The plank, explaining itself. It simply means that I believe we should take care of the roads we build, particularly the new belt road, and not just stand back and let the roads go to pieces as fast as the traffic and the weather can break them up."

"I believe that we should do more caretaking and less rebuilding in the road line, because it is not only cheaper to keep what we have than to replace them, but it gives us good roads all the time and not just at those times when the rebuilt road is finished."

"I believe in hiring good men to look after every bit of our road work and in paying them good wages, making their jobs depend upon how they do their work. As each man will be responsible for his own particular section of road, it will be easy to tell who is earning his pay and who is not."

"We will have only so much money to spend during the next two years. I am told that our income as a city will be about a million dollars a year. That money has to be made do a great deal of it. If we can save our roads by looking after them, we can take our saved money and go ahead with the building of more roads. If we are going to run a hospital, take proper care of and enlarge our park system, enlarge the fire department and the police force to guard citizens and property and go ahead with the laying of permanent pavements in the business sections of the city, we have to spend wisely and get full value in return for every dollar that goes out."

"With a million dollars a year we can do much, if we handle it properly, and the cantonnier system, in my opinion, will be a great money saver."

CUSTOMS MEN ASK NIGHT PAY

WASHINGTON, October 7.—Secretary MacVeagh of the treasury asked Attorney General Wickersham today for an opinion as to whether customs inspectors should be paid extra for the examination at night of the personal baggage of tourists disembarking after the regular customs hours. The question is likely to involve the point whether tourists should pay for night inspection or let their baggage lie over until morning.

For years customs inspectors handled such baggage at night free of charge. The law provides that extra pay be allowed on cargo unloaded after hours, the steamship companies being charged with the extra expense. The inspectors contend that baggage is cargo, and they have been sustained by the solicitor of the treasury department.

HOT SHOT FROM WARM SPEAKERS

Parker, Paris, Dowsett and Company Stir Up Things in Kaneohe.

GEORGE F. RENTON.
A rooster crowed when he started to speak yesterday.

*****
(From Saturday Advertiser)

On a bench beneath a mango tree, in front of the general store at Kaneohe, on Windward Oahu, yesterday afternoon, stood in turn many of the Republican candidates, addressing a picturesque and certainly earnest crowd of a little less than two hundred good country folk. The long front veranda of the Lee Wo Chong commercial establishment served to accommodate the women and children and the orchestra, while the men gathered around the mango to harken to the campaign preaching.

Mrs. and Miss Bishaw sang a duet now and then, and Madame Alapai led a glee club. A dozen automobiles descended the Pali, bringing the candidates and other workers. Leis were put about the neck of each Honolulu arrival as he descended from his machine.

Much enthusiasm prevailed, and the crowd was in an appreciative mood. All speakers were applauded, while some received more than the ordinary, so that it was clear to see who was well supported in the precinct and who was still under consideration. Since most of the speakers were anxious to be back in town for other stump meetings at seven-thirty o'clock, the speeches were necessarily made short, and when one occupied more than five minutes it meant greater brevity for others.

About four o'clock John Bell, candidate for deputy sheriff in that section, opened the exercises. Jack Dowsett, candidate for the senate, handed out some warm shot for the Democratic aspirant for congress. He took up certain statements which had been made by McCandless and refuted them.

Refuting McCandless.

Link had said that certain Republican candidates, referring to Dowsett and Renton, for the senate, had been guilty of lies in their statements to the people. In answer to this, Dowsett declared that a reference to his legislative record would show that he had faithfully fulfilled every promise he had made. He said that the Democrats suggested that he (Dowsett) and Renton were so tied up in sugar interests that they couldn't think of any other interests.

Replying to this, Dowsett declared that McCandless was the last man who should make any such statement, for he, McCandless, was gradually buying up the valleys in order to control the water supply that he might sell it to the sugar plantations for a quarter of a million dollars. Link had made his money in sugar and a difference between Link and Dowsett was that Link had made a great deal more money. If the people on the windward side of Oahu did not look out, Link McCandless would soon have bought up all the water, so that the poor Hawaiians might soon not have even enough water for their taro patches.

Dowsett told how for sixteen years he had worked for Bishop & Company and invested his savings in sugar stock and so made what he now possesses. He had made his money honestly; both had made it out of sugar, but Link had made a great deal more, and it was hypocritical of Link to criticize anybody for their connection with sugar.

Dowsett also said that the Democrats were charging that the Republicans, if in power again, would seek to effect a law so that a man couldn't have a vote unless he had $1000 worth of property. That lie was easily answered. Look at the Republican platform and see if any such idea entered there.

Paris Wins Applause.

Edwin H. Paris, candidate for the board of supervisors, drew attention immediately by his opportune reference to the poor condition of the Pali road. Having just autoed over it, he knew whereof he spoke, and he related how, visiting his brother-in-law at Kaneohe, during the summer, he had very frequently to pass over this steep and winding thoroughfare, which is really dangerous unless it be kept in the right kind of repair. It had not been kept in the right kind of repair.

He urged a straight Republican board of supervisors, with the Republican mayor, Sam Parker, so that such urgent needs as the Pali road repairs could be attended to. Kaneohe and neighboring hamlets had not received their just dues in the way of public improvements. It was the pledged intention of Paris and his associates on the Republican supervisory ticket, when they got into office, and they expected to be elected to office to see to it that this section of the island got what it was entitled to from the appropriations and the party patronage.

Paris declared that he knew for a fact, by careful observation and comparison, that there was now three times the traffic over the roads referred to as existed two years ago.

Paris elicited applause when he remarked that he was a knave by nationality, but Hawaiian at heart. He climbed to his present position in business from the foot of the ladder in Honolulu, and he felt very close to the people whose votes he desired for himself and his friends. The speaker drove home the idea of the necessity of electing a full Republican board of supervisors, if the electorate wanted to see good team work which would result in bringing about the improvements needed in country roads.

He touched on what the Republican party was doing in the way of spending money in these islands on naval and military facilities and fortifications, and warned the people against "voting for a question mark" in the form of a Democratic administration. They had their children to consider, and the happiness of their children depended upon the prosperity of the country, which prosperity would endure under the continuation of Republican administration.

Many Other Speakers.

"Old Warhorse" S. K. Mahoe, for the house, spoke in Hawaiian, as did Kaneohe, also for the representatives. C. G. Bartlett, for supervisor, made a favorable impression. He modestly referred to his record and informed his attentive audience that he was the manager of the brewery. He was not a malihini. He knew the country's needs, and he was going to work hard for better roads and more liberal appropriations.

George Smithies spoke for his candidacy for the office of treasurer and for the rest of the Republican ticket. He delivered his address in the Hawaiian language.

Kalooha, who was a member of the board of supervisors when Charles Hustace was chairman of that body, six years ago, handed out a little surprise. He said Hustace, who is an independent candidate for mayor, had declared at Kaneohe, and also from the Honolulu soapbox, that he, Hustace, had been responsible for the raise in road laborers' pay from $1.25 to $1.50 per day. This statement by Hustace, Kalooha denied. He stated it was he who had introduced the resolution; that the resolution had been seconded by Andrew Cox; that four other members of the board had voted for it, and that Hustace, the chairman, was the only member who had voted against it.

The American Language.

E. K. Fernandez, running for the house, got off a new argument. He answered some of the talk of "Cannon Ball" Kaniho. Kaniho had ridiculed the younger Hawaiian candidates because many of them could not speak the Hawaiian language, whereas they were born in Hawaii. Fernandez said that English was the official language of these Hawaiian Islands, and he wanted to know why he should understand Hawaiian. He is running for the house, where, according to the Organic Act, English is the parliamentary language. Kaniho, he remarked, knew so little English that he had to have an interpreter when in the legislature to even know what question was before the house.

A. L. Castle, for the house, hammered some more good logic regarding the belt road and the great register. Castle has a fatherly feeling regarding these propositions and wins sympathy when he handles the subjects.

David Notley, for supervisor, said in Hawaiian largely what other supervisory candidates said in English, passing on cumulative argument and getting applause.

Carlos Long and Andrew Cox, both for the board of supervisors, lost nothing by mounting the bench under the big mango tree. Everybody knew them and apparently coincided with what they had to say in reference to the next board being Republican.

Colonel Parker Greeted.

Col. Sam Parker, for mayor, talked altogether in Hawaiian. A special song was sung for him, and he was roundly applauded. He said a vote for Hustace was a vote thrown away, with which sentiment the throng seemed heartily in accord. He cited his platform of improvements and better wages and more liberal appropriations, and descended from the rostrum amid an ovation exceeded only by the sweetness of the Hawaiian music which was played in his honor.

George Renton, for the senate, was in good mood. As he ascended the bench a lusty rooster crowed behind the mango tree. It means his election. It is a prophecy, according to the oldest inhabitant who had helped himself to the front seat of the biggest auto, the better to enjoy the speeches and music.

Renton spoke to the point in reference to roadwork; how that homesteads were to be opened before long and better roads would be required to accommodate the increased traffic. Better roads would come with a Republican board of supervisors, with a Republican legislature. Since the last days of the monarchy, he said, the Republican element had shown what progress meant. Progress goes on as long as the Republican party goes on.

"Your Prince, the Delegate to Congress, believes in the Republican party," said Renton. "He is leading us. You have confidence in your Prince; then have you not confidence in the men he is leading? Vote for the men who are following the leadership of your Prince in this campaign."

That took.

AIRMEN TO THE RESCUE.

SEA CLIFF, New York, October 19.—Rescued from drowning by an aviator who came to his aid in a hydro-aeroplane, was the adventure of Walter Strobach in Hempstead harbor this evening. Strobach, a poor swimmer, fell from a rowboat a half-mile off shore. His plight was brought to the attention of Charles Wald, aviator. Wald was tuning his machine preparatory to a flight. He covered the half-mile in less than a minute, tossed a life-preserver to Strobach and pulled the man into the machine. Then he made a return flight with Strobach as a passenger.

SPECIAL MESSAGE RE FISHER'S TRIP

President May Send One to Congress—How Washington Felt Before Secretary's Return.

By Ernest G. Walker.

(Mail Special to The Advertiser.)
WASHINGTON, October 14.—Secretary of the Interior Fisher is in California at this writing. Officials of the department of the interior have no advice about his plans for seeing the President and taking up Hawaiian matters, including the reappointment of Governor Fear. It is unlikely that the President will not tell after he has consulted with Secretary Fisher. There is confidence here, as there has been all along, that Governor Fear will be given another term.

Under all the circumstances, however, it is doubtful whether the nomination is made before congress convenes. There is no special reason why it should be. Gov. Fear, as is well understood in Hawaii, serves till his successor is appointed and qualified. His term of four years expired some months ago. There is no necessity for a recess appointment and the President would naturally wait till he could place the nomination before the senate for confirmation. This, of course, could not be done till December.

It is entirely probable, however, that the President may announce his decision before that time. The President is still at Beverly. Secretary Fisher is tarrying on the Pacific Coast. The President expects to go to Hot Springs, Virginia, late in October and it may be that Secretary Fisher will have opportunity to talk with him in two or three weeks. His report to the President will naturally have much influence as to Hawaiian affairs that come up for consideration at Washington during the remaining period of this administration.

Special Message Possible.

Because of the prominence of Secretary Fisher's visit to the islands and the comprehensive investigation he undertook, touching matters of much importance, it is expected that the secretary will have something to say about it in his annual report and also that the President may make more comprehensive mention of Hawaii in his annual message than he usually does. It is even mentioned that the President may make the matter the subject of a special message to congress or find some other effective way of getting on permanent record the results of the Secretary's investigation.

Sugar Tariff.

There are few people of Hawaiian interest now in Washington and are likely to be none for some weeks yet. Former Judge Ballou has returned from a vacation to New England. He and Mrs. Ballou have given up their residence on Connecticut avenue and are moving into a suite of apartments. As soon as the election is over and the name of the next President is known and the party control of the senate and the house has been determined, there will be much speculation and discussion and preparation with reference to future tariff revision. That will include the sugar schedule. No attempts at tariff legislation are to be expected, however, this winter at the short session of congress. That will be reserved for an extra session. While there will be much talk, pro and con, regarding the wisdom of an extra session in the spring the probabilities are all in favor of it.

Dr. C. L. Marlatt, entomologist of the department of agriculture, has recently returned here, following his trip of inspection to California and Hawaii, with reference to the Mediterranean fly. He states that he is well satisfied with the results of his trip and that he is certain much can be done toward stamping out the pest in the Hawaiian Islands. He is doubtful whether it can be entirely obliterated, at least for quite a long time, but he thinks it can be prevented from getting entrenched on the Pacific Coast.

OAHU AND PINEAPPLE FEATURES OF MARKET

Oahu did not advance as might have been expected from the statements published yesterday. On the contrary, it dropped to $25.3375 with plenty on the market at that price. Hawaiian Pineapple sold at 44.50 and down to 44.25. It has been suggested that much of this stock is being sought for mainland clients, but inquiry yesterday disclosed the fact that more is being sent from the Coast than is sent over there in the trading. Only $5.00 was bid for Oahu against $5.12 1/2 asked. The market was weak throughout the day and any prophecy concerning conditions would be deemed ill-advised in most quarters. After the course Oahu took yesterday it is presumed that buyers and brokers think for themselves and are not guided by the expressions of those believed to be in the know.

TELEPHONE SHARES.

At the special meeting of the shareholders of the Mutual Telephone Co., yesterday, it was decided to issue 500 shares treasury stock for the purpose of raising funds for investments in other securities. The action is rather mystifying inasmuch as the character of securities is not mentioned.

William P. Kennett, president of the German-American Bank, and former manager of the Francis J. Kennett Company, a brokerage concern of New York, died in St. Louis at the age of sixty-two. He was one of the city's best known financiers, having been president of both the Merchants' Exchange and the Clearing House Association.
